THE KING RETURNS.

The King, looking fit and well returns home and meets his War Ministers after his strenuous twelve days tour of the Italian Battle Front. His first official visitor to Buckingham Palace was that other inveterate war-front traveller Mr. Winston Churchill. In an informal talk the King told them of his experience on this fighting front.

Here is Britain's Brains Trust who are directing inflexible war on the Germans. You may be sure that the War Cabinet was told in glowing terms of the prowess and dash of our armies in Italy, who have driven back the enemy 250 miles since last May. Reminiscences exchanged between Prime Minister and King. Both have seen in action the skill, organisation and high courage which are carrying us so brilliantly along the road to victory.
