MILLS IN TRAINING.

At an R.A.F. Station, Freddie Mills, British heavyweight Champion, gets in trim to defend his title against Jack London. The fight was first fixed a year ago, but what with a training accident in which the challenger fractured a rib, and later on, flying bomb interference, it had to be postponed three times. Now Ted Breadribb, Mill's Manager, is hoping the fourth time will be lucky, as he watches some of the punches the Champion is getting ready for Jack London.

There's no future for Freddie in hitting a punch-ball....
Where's Jack London? But no doubt Jack has something in store as well. The fight, promoted by the Northern Sportsmen's Charity Fund, will take place at Bells Vee, Manchester, on September 15th, and Pathe Gazette plans to bring you pictures... pictures with a punch.
