SOVIET DRIVE ON WARSAW

At dawn, Soviet tanks move up on the suburb of Praga in their great September advance on Warsaw.... The Russian artillery lays down a tremendous barrage....

Katoushas, the Russian rocket guns, shower projectiles on the enemy....and add to the thunder of the artillery.

Following the armour come the infantry - Polish and Russian - for Polish detachments are fighting for their native land side by side with the Soviet Forces.

Marshal of the Soviet Union, Rokosovsky. A great soldier leading this weighty offensive on the central front.

The outskirts of Praga are reached....Fighting is heavy all the way....

A Polish Regiment marches through the captured town.... from now on they will carry the special title of The Praga Regiment....The Polish population, relieved at last from the cruelty and oppression of the Germans cheer their liberators through the streets.

....The leaders - The Commander-in-Chief of the Soviet Forces and the Head of the Polish Liberation Forces.

Across the waters of the nearby Vistula lies the city of Warsaw. Over the Polish capital there hangs a big tactical and political question mark. Military moves are largely governed by the diplomatic problems of the moment.
