NAZI ARCTIC BASES CAPTURED

A few hundred miles from the North Pole, American coast guards lower depth charges into the pack ice, and blast a channel to secret German bases established off the Greenland coast.

A long boat pulls away to destroy the radio stations from which the Nazis were sending weather reports to Germany. When the German expeditions installed themselves there, they sneaked in plenty of supplies.

Back to the U.S. Cutter comes a load of 60 prisoners. They had scuttled their 3 ships before surrendering. No more weather reports for the Nazis, a new centre of low depression has set in.
