"MANILA'S V DAY"

The final assault on Manila, capitol of the Phillipines, reaches a climax in smoke and flame. Even the City's baseball ground is pitted with Japafexholes where the enemy resists to the last.

The capture of Manila is completed in the old Spanish city, the Intramuros, within the wall. There the Japanese garrison made its last stand. They ask no mercy just as they give none.

In the devastated city, tens of thousands of Filipines are homeless. They have endured three years of Japanese brutality, now they seek only food, shelter and peace.

For General MacArthur, Manila's capture is a personal triumph. He led the hopeless fight against Jap invasion and now returns the victor. Now, in the name of the United States, hard-hitting, soft spoken General MacArthur turns over the government of the Phillipines the President Osmeña.
