The first of the breed of traitors who sold out to the Germans, Quisling, arrives at the Oslo Court of Justice for the closing stages of his trial. Medical experts had scotched the suggestion that Norway's leading Nazi was suffering from a mental disease. That line of defence gone, Quisling had a lot of explaining to do.

The court was crowded, but the verbal fireworks of the recent Petain trial were missing. With Quisling in the dock, and the Nazi war criminals scheduled for judgement in the near future, the world will soon be a cleaner place. Field Marshal Montgomery had a narrow escape when his 'plane crashed into a tree at Oldenberg, Germany. Monty was treated at a nearby Canadian Military Hospital, after which he insisted on completing the full programme of his visit to the Canadian Army of Occupation.

X-ray reports later revealed that Monty had suffered an injury to the back - - - but the show went on just the same.
