DAY OF REMEMBRANCE

This year Remembrance Day commemorates the ending of two World wars. It may be that the public have already bought their last Poppy on the eleventh day of the eleventh month; a United Nations ceremony may replace it. Mr. Dalton bought his poppy early, followed by his neighbour from No. 10 Downing Street, Mrs. Attlee.

Tommy Trinder bought his in his dressing room.

America's ambassador, Mr. John Winant. And, (met on the steps of the War Office) Field Marshal Alexander.

To the humble, no less than the great, memory is a beautiful thing, which no man may take away. While the nation was stilled in Remembrance, we were privileged to stand by the tomb of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey. The young son of the late Lance Corporal Harden, V.C., of Northfleet in Kent pays tribute to his father's memory.
