

46-8
C-24P001

PARIS

With General de Gaulle out of the running, France's three main political parties agree on a successor, M. Felix Guin.

Formerly President of the Constituent Assembly, Socialist Guin receives the official paper naming him Head of the Government.

Polling 497 votes out of 555, the new chief promises to iron out France's troubles with a strong coalition government.