

ALICE IN FUNLAND

Watching the bucking bronco bikes, it's a big day for little Alice when father takes her round the newest thing in fun fairs. British showmen exhibiting at Horticultural Hall, London, still plan to make up on the roundabouts what they lose upon the swings - and they've a whole new set of pleasure-park machines to do it with. And who wouldn't change places with Alice at a time like this.

There's a face at the window - and it's Alice in a new sort of wonderland. There are motor bikes and tanks, aeroplanes and jeeps. The only sad note is that three out of every four will have to go for export.

A sure favourite is Cinderella's coach, and with this model, you can be sure it won't suddenly change back into a pumpkin. The end of a perfect day for Alice in Funland.
