

U.S. WAR SUPPLIES FOR U.K.

Stacked in the mud on Newbury Racecourse, where a rail supply line runs over turf thoroughbreds used to pound, thousands of tons of British made reverse lease-lend supplies for the American Army have been handed back to us. Bailey Bridge sections lie around near a forest of unwanted cranes. Tucked away in this depot is a gold mine of rationed goods. A hundred thousand chocolate bars, biscuits, towels, blankets and soap by the ton. Locomotives too. Here three weeks already rust and rot may claim the lot unless officialdom gets moving.
