WELSH TRIUMPH AT TWICKENHAM

England's international rugby fifteen got a big surprise from the dark-shirted Welsh side at Twickenham. A vociferous 35,000 crowd, with rosettes and Welsh voices, recaptured the old thrill of the game after a break of six long years.

True to the form of this topsy turvy season, Wales upset the English side by sheer speed and split second tackling. Top-line defensive play by both sides kept the scoring down but Wales earned their win. Their forwards were on top in the loose play and behind them Gleave was an ace coverer. England showed up best in the mauls and tight scrums, but the best wasn't quite good enough.

The first half ended all square but after that it was Wales all the way. High spot was a fine come-back by Welsh Skipper Hayden Tanner. After six years abroad he ripped up the game in copy-book style. Fifteen minutes after half-time, Tanner flashed through a packed defence to hurl himself on the line. And that's what made the Welshmen sing.
