

GENIUS IN AN ASYLUM

Living in a Michigan mental hospital is 45 year-old Horace Hinders, once a promising pianist who became utterly insane. Now through the healing power of music, he is fighting his way back. Critics have called him a genius. Says the hospital superintendent:

"This man is living in a world of fantasy, you and I are living in a world of reality. It is the function of the mental hospital, not only this hospital but every other mental hospital to try and bring these people out of the world of fantasy into the world of reality. Many methods of therapy are used. In this particular instance we are trying to use music therapy to bring this man back from his world of fantasy."

And Horace Hinders plays Chopin's "Fantasy."
