

MAY PARADE

Two hundred thousand people streamed into London's Hyde Park where left-wingers of all Parties turned out to celebrate an historic May Day - the first since the world was rid of fascism. A socialist jamboree to mark the first stage of Labour's five year plan. Keeping themselves in trim for the next elections, the men with the big voices gave Hyde Park a May Day to remember.

Demonstrating in Liverpool (students painted the town as red as the police would let 'em on their International Students Day. Using an assortment of local transport, the University Rag-men turned the spotlight on students of many nations.

Star turn were the dental boys. Their version of appointment with fear might lose 'em a few future customers. All good clean fun - if you haven't a toothache.