IN LINE OF MARCH

8,000 Land, Sea and Air Rangers massed in London's Hyde Park for a march past and salute to Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. In columns of six the girls took $\frac{1}{2}$ an hour to march past the saluting base. Wearing their uniforms as Sea Rangers, the two Princesses ran expert eyes over their fellow-service members.

Their ranks thinned by time, members of the Old Contemptibles Association marched to St. Paul's Cathedral for their annual memorial parade.

Among the attending dignitaries was the Lord Mayor of London. A crowded Cathedral paid tribute to the gallant company of WWI veterans. By contrast, here are overseas servicemen of the last war. To the sound of Eigan national harmonies, Empire V-day marchers send messages of welcome from Kensington Gardens.
