Whiteshirted England came up against brilliant goalkeeping by French goalie Da Rui in the international soccer battle at the Paris Colombes Stadium. England attacks crumpled as Da Rui saved from Carter and Hagan. And now it's Lawton's turn for a bang and it's Da Rui again with a terrific two-fisted punch out.

First blood to France as Proeff beat goalie Williams with a rising ball. And just to make the pill more bitter - here's another goal from French winger, Vaast. (And this is the game we taught the world). England's one goal came from a header by Hagan - Score, 2-1 to France.

The first of all bicycles was well in the picture at Scotland's Courthill Smithy where a ceremonial gathering unveiled a plaque to the memory of the man who invented the pedal bike a hundred years ago - Kirkpatrick MacMillan. In his time, they called him the devil on wheels. Whiskered rider Jack Miller shows that there's plenty of life yet in the forerunner of the World's 70 million bikes.
