POLO ON WHEELS

Pole for the million, with all the thrills of the spills, and light weight, brake-less bikes in place of the aristocratic ponies. Invented in 1891, the game nearly disappeared into the junk box. 1946 sportsmen put it back on the bill boards. Here comes a goal as the 2-wheel gamblers pedal it out at a Selhurst Park London League match. For most goals, bike, men and ball go through together.

For rough riders, cycle polo's a natural. After a bump or two, you can put a spoke in anybody's wheel.
