

SCOTLAND'S ROYAL WELCOME.

Laying the memorial stone at the Scottish Veterans Garden City at Mairhouse, was one of the Kings many ceremonial functions during his tour of Scotland. Being presented here is that grand old man of Scottish humour, Sir Harry Lauder. Would you face this way for a moment sir, please.

Next to be honoured was Will Wyllie. Now, what's the matter with Glasgow?

And from the roof of ancient Holyroods House the King and Queen, Princess Elisabeth and quiet, demure Princess Margaret are greeted by the wild skirling of the pipes.

As a climax to Scotland's rejoicing, the King attends the anniversary celebrations of the Scottish section of the British Legion.

And all Edinburgh turns out to see them as they stand in the open military car on their way back to the Palace at Holyrood.
