

ATLANTIC QUEEN

Scotland's Firth of Clyde makes shipping history. Speeding seaward on her first official trials, the Queen Elizabeth shows her paces and leaps back into headlines. Aboard her, the Queen, and the two Princesses. Escorting the royal party, is skipper Sir James Bisset.

Entirely refurnished from stocks hidden away during the war years, the giant liner is the last word in restored luxury. This trip she's gained yet another distinction, a Queen took the Wheel.

On war service as a troop carrier, the Elizabeth transported nearly a million servicemen. Now that's all over, she's once again Queen of the Atlantic.
