

THE WINDSORS COME HOME

To Dover comes the steamship Canterbury. Aboard her, a man and woman coming home. Into a battery of camera fire, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. From Dover, the Pathe camera-team followed them to an early morning meeting at Sunningdale, Berkshire. In the gardens of Ednam Lodge, (country home of the Earl of Dudley) the Duke and Duchess gave us these charming informal pictures. Not far from Sunningdale is Fort Belvedere. There the Duke planned his abdication. But that was ten years ago. Now, he and his wife are welcomed back to England.

The Duke is now 52, his wife 50. Only once before, since their marriage, have they been in Britain. For them both, their visit to us now will seem like a journey among memories of a poignant past.
