PEOPLE IN CAMERA

Now for the week's personality line-up. Football's Stanley House greets West Bromwich Albion's veteran of 50 years, Fred Everiss. Place, Birmingham, who's Lord Mayer presided. On the right here is Arsenal's George Allison, and here's a whole screamful of George.

Ex-soccer star Reed was there and a grand old-timer was Joe Reader - Albion's goalie in 1886. With him, present skipper Elliott. Making the presentation was West Brom's President the Earl of Dartmouth.

And from a guest (and Pathe News) here's to Fred Everiss.

This time, a ship-load of crated, four footed people. The Royal Albert docks receive the biggest-ever consignment of new animals for London Zoo.

Altogether there were four giraffes, three lions, two leopards, a python and many others. And the pictures were going fine till the two chimpanzees got at the camera. It didn't look quite the same when they'd done with it. So we had to settle for this policeman-giraffe double-act.

And now meet the gent who beat up the camera. Such a right little fellow.

From Australia, skipper Wally Hammond and his men go into action in the Test team's first try-out against Western Australia. Here are a selection of the game's highlights. Form-judging preludes to the battle for the Ashes.

Here's England bowler Wright in unorthodox arm-swinging form. One of his wickets came when Hammond caught batsman Herbert. And with the score at 366, Australia's innings ended when Smith got an L.B.W. decision against Cumming.

Cumming again; this time bowling to Yorkshire's Paul Gibb - opening bat with Washbrook.

Not Playing, but watching closely; Surrey's Alec Bedser and Arsenal and England gamester Dennis Compton. And here's our white hope. Wally Hammond on the first leg of an innings that ended at a score of 208.

Next step, the Ashes.
