PARLIAMENT GOES BACK

From Buckingham Palace, the King and Queen drive in semi-state towards the Houses of Parliament. Following warnings of terrorist action, they travel at a trot instead of the usual walking pace through streets lined with troops.

This session will prove one of the most decisive in House of Commons history. Bills affecting every aspect of our national life are down for consideration. In view of their importance - plus the fact that they are certain to arouse widespread controversy - Pathe News brings you this comment on the coming session from Conservative, Harold Macmillan.

SPEECH

And for the Government, Lord President of the Council, Herbert Morrison.
