JAFFA SENDS US ORANGES

Once a famous name in British shops, Jaffa hopes to make a return to favour this Christmas. Our Palestine reporter takes time off from covering terrorist outbreaks and sends these pictures of orange gathering in the golden groves of Jaffa.

Here Jews and Arabs work peacefully together. And, judging by the speed, they're paid on piece-work rates.

Reason for the rush is the red stamp marked "urgent" appearing on all British orders. And with Palestine railways bombed out of action, the oranges are shipped straight from Jaffa. May they reach us in time to fill a hole in millions of Christmas stockings.
