Next, something new in the London Zoo's birthrate. Meet, Mrs. Boa Constrictor - and all the 42 little Boas. Since the family came to Britain, this is their first happy event - and with 42 family allowances coming up the old lady ought to feel she's something to be proud of.

For watching youngsters it's the thrill of the day. And nobody seemed scared of the snakes - probably they've never heard how tough a Boa Constrictor can be if it decides to get rough.

They're all friends together - so much so that the bodyguard gets a kiss from another Boa.

From Burmese General U. Aung San, head of his country's Delegation to Britain, our reporter was given this uncompromising message.

Burma's future may be in this man's hands.
