OPINION POLL No. 6

FUEL CRISIS

Coal - and the great exertions of Britain's miners, transport workers and deckers, broke the back of the fuel crisis. How much went into these efforts, you can see from these pictures taken at Barnsley in the heart of the great South Yorkshire coalfields. The Prime Minister's Fuel General Staff asked for a 100 per cent effort, to bring the coal to the needed areas - they got it. Up the Thames come the little ships. They braved gales and snowstorms to bring the coal where it was needed. At the power stations depleted of almost all their stocks they unload the cargoes. Meanwhile, our survey team went out to hear the opinion of the man in the street. From a busy main street in London the voice of the people answers the question of the hour.

SPEECH

And in another part of London, talking point of the week is still Fuel Minister Emmanuel Shinwell.
