BAL TABARIN DRAWS RECORD CROWDS

On a tour of Paris, our reporter looks in at the Bal Tabarin. Famed in pre-war days for its beautiful girls, we find the standard as high as ever. The Tabarin girls of 1947 still kick their legs in the air, and clothing coupons don't seem to worry them.

To the thousand of foreign visitors, the Bal Tabarin is a "must". Last month's attendances were the highest-ever.

When the electricity is turned off, these six-footer beauties get a special heating bonus. The final spectacle comes on a midnight. Everyone meets down below and up they come.

A Mecca for "tired business men" this particular bit of Paris keeps the "mixture as before."
