At Winchester, the National Union of Agricultural Workers unfurl their new banner. Farm workers from all parts of the country were at the rally. Alfred Dan, on the right, General Secretary of the Union, performed the ceremony. The first use of the new flag is the march through the streets. At the Guildhall steps the salute is taken by the Lord Mayor of Winchester and Professor Cyril "Brains Trust" Joad, farmer between broadcasts. The old flag was lost during the war now the country's farm workers have a new union symbol.

We look in at the doubles sporting championship. The local old age pensioners association challenge the youth club to a marble and skipping contest. The old 'uns show they haven't lost their skill. It's just like the good old days, only ballbearings were used instead of marbles.

In the skipping contest the juniors had the first go but the veterans are game. Their best performers are still in reserve. In Malden they won't forget the evening's contest. For us it's just a record of a novel competition.

To Moscow for the Prime Minister's Conference goes Ernest Bevin. Said he "I have high hopes for good progress in our efforts to build a lasting peace". Looking better than he has done for months, hard-worked Bevin was in jovial mood. The eyes of all the nations turn to the Soviet capital and the leaders of the world's peacemakers.
