WIDE WIDE WORLD

In South Africa, the royal train comes to a halt among the Ostrich farms. The Royal Family look in on Ostrich farmer Basic Meyer. The baby birds are introduced to the Queen first.

A frequent wearer of Ostrich feathers, the Queen helps herself to a new set. No doubt this will be the start of a new vogue in feathered hats.

The King, followed with the cutter. Later the Royal Family ate an ostrich egg omelette.

From Cape Province's Ostrich farms, the Royal tour continues into the heart of the Dominion.

Meet, Juliet, Orlowick's cheeriest chimp. When we called, she was getting ready to go for her morning stroll.

Juliet is quite a girl, she lives as one of the family with Mr. and Mrs. Stone of Orlowick High Road.

Now for breakfast. There's nothing like a cup of tea to start the day with.

How's this for a chimp with manners?

Trouble with Juliet, she soon gets tired of being a lady. That's the end of her date with Romeo.

Fingers were made before spears anyway. This is still the safest method.

And after all - when a lady's had tea, she expects to be left alone.
