BRITISH CADETS VISIT U.S. ACADEMY

British Cadets visit the U.S. Naval Academy. H.M.S "Frobisher", on her way home from the West Indies, calls at Annapolis, Maryland.

180 British boys, all of them from the Royal Naval College, Dartmouth spent eight days in America. During their visit they changed places with their U.S. counterparts.

The Cadets take part in an old Annapolis custom - throwing pennies at the statue of Ticumsch - the academy's special god of luck. The head of the statue comes from an old sailing ship. In the summer the American boys will come to England.
