TRUMAN SPEECH - A FATEFUL HOUR

Before America's Congress, President Truman, makes the most momentous speech since the death of Franklin Roosevelt. He declares political war on Soviet Russia. In American eyes, Britain is no longer the bulwark against Communist expansion.

SPEECH

From now on, it means that anti-Communist America will make its influence felt in European affairs.

SPEECH

Truman points the way to a new foreign policy. Timed to coincide with the sitting of the Moscow Conference the speech means that the United States now faces up to its international responsibilities. America has decided that her true frontiers are in Europe.
