

Following Glasgow's lead, 10,000 London dock workers are out on strike. Albert Finstky (Stevedores and Deckers Union Official) addresses the men. The strike began on the Clyde, when deckers walked out in sympathy, they say, with men who had been dismissed from their posts. At a time when the nation is being urged to yet greater efforts, can Britain afford these hold-ups?