

DAILY MAIL FILM FESTIVAL

Lord and Lady Rothermere receive Anna Neagle, film producer husband Herbert Wilcox, and rising screen personality Michael Wilding. The occasion was the presentation of the Daily Mail Film awards - Britain's Oscars. Patricia Roc, in strapless evening gown, arrives to join the parade of leading film stars.

The Rothermeres next greet Michael Rennie and his wife. Diamonds, mink coats and glittering evening dress all had a night out at this gala for British films. Film stars and people who make the stars - all are there.

Arriving now is Greta Gunt with Eric Portman as escort. More than two million people voted in the film poll. The people who see the pictures decide who's who in British films. To James Mason (now in New York) and Margaret Lockwood goes the award of 1947's best actor and actress. Margaret Lockwood receives her trophy from Lady Rothermere.

Chosen by an overwhelming number of votes as the year's best film is "Piccadilly Incident" starring Anna Neagle and Michael Wilding, produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox.

Among the evening's notabilities is veteran showman, C.B. Cochran. Here is Associated British Chief Sir Philip Warter and Lady Warter.

"Piccadilly Incident" producer Herbert Wilcox, joins in the celebrations, with his award-winning team.

Mrs. Stan Laurel and Mrs. Oliver Hardy arrived with two gentlemen - two or three hours late.
