

ONE MINUTE NEWS

In London and Birmingham, the first British Industries Fair since 1939. It's designed to show the whole range of British production to overseas buyers. A look at the fashion display, shows that Britain can still produce the world's best. Many thousands of foreign business men, who visited the fair, were amazed at this tale of post-war recovery. Five thousand foreign buyers are there on opening day to order goods from Britain's shop window.

To the British public, looking with envy at this fashionable evening gown, the answer is still "For Export only." Despite the difficulties created by the fuel crisis, British industry can look with pride and confidence at this exhibition of its products. A goods-hungry world wants to buy British. Our industry must meet their orders.

From Moscow, pictures of the Russian Brides of British servicemen. Refusal to let them leave Russia brought protests direct to Stalin from Attlee, Harold Stassen and Bevin. So far they're still in Russia. Here are Mrs. Clara Hall and Baby Nikolai whom his father has never seen.

Nadya - wife of John Bolton of Hornsey.

Nidejda - Mrs. Clifford Whitehead of Tottenham.

Laidilla Squire - wife of Cambridge undergraduate Peter Squire.

Mrs. Olga Burke - her husband lives in Baling.

Ira - wife of Clifford Rowley of Houghton, Lancashire. Its Russia versus Cupid and nobody yet knows what the end will be.

On the House of Commons Terrace one morning we found Edinburgh M.P. Sir William Darling launching his latest crusade for the wearing of formal dress in the Commons. His opponent is Alfred Robens M.P. for Wansbeck, Northumberland.

We left them - still arguing.