WORLD AT YOUR ELBOW

From Pathe's Far Eastern cameraman comes the latest report on the fighting in Indonesia. American equipped and American trained Dutch marines land at Java. The Dutch claim that their landings were preventive police action. To the world - it looked like war. Scorched earth policy was applied all over the island.

The Indonesian Government appealed to the United Nations Security Council. Accepting the American and British offer of mediation, the Dutch ordered their troops to cease fire. Now the whole case goes to the United Nations. With Palestine and Greece also on their hands, will UNO prove to be strong enough to prevent a new Far Eastern flare-up?
