

MAE WEST LOOKS 'EM OVER

Swaying her hips in the inimitable "Come Up and See Me Sometime" style, Miss West gives London's latest fashion display the once-over. Viewers of the New Look take an odd bet that Mae will prefer to stick to a look which favours nature's charms. One would hardly imagine Diamond Lil doing much wrong in this outfit.

This large pique off-the-face hat (with fluted brim - set off against a ballet-length cotton dress) is more likely to Mae's taste, but for dinner she'd hardly look herself in "Legacy," a Victorian model.

Having avoided the trials of marriage, Miss West would hardly care for "Honeymoon," a pleated dress in striped rayon. Mae always makes the point that it's not the dress, it's the filling that really counts. And it's the face under the hat, too, which carried off the milliner's creation, but whether the hairdressers will co-operate to find a style which fits the hat, we wouldn't know.
