SCOTTISH FINALISTS DRAW

Star-studded Glasgow Rangers kick off against Morton (the Greenock outsiders) in the Scottish Cup Final, played off at Hampden Park. Eddie Rutherford, No. 7, deputising for injured international Willie Waddell, starts off the first attack, and only goalie Cowan's smart save prevents Rangers from scoring. Instead of the predicted walk-over, misfortune befalls the pride of Glasgow. Speeding away on the left-wing, David Cupples is fouled by Rangers' McCall. 135,000 fans rear - as Morton's Jimmy White - and the Hampden wind - place the free kick in the corner of the net.

A goal down after three minutes play, the Rangers (despite the seven internationals in their team) find the Morton defenders (who have the wind as twelfth man) hard to beat. But the Glasgow team's heavy pressure gets its reward. From George Young's header, the ball goes via Terry Gillick, to Willie Thornton. Taking his return pass, Gillick slams home the equaliser.

Even extra time brings no more goals and the cup final ends a draw.
