PATHE REPORTER MEETS:

From two different corners of the world come people whose names make news. Aboard the PORT HOBART, at Tilbury, Pathe Reporter meets New Zealand's Olympic team. Half-miler Doug Harris - at present studying in England - now joins his team-mates, whose David and Goliath act must have given the tailor (who fitted them out with blazers) something of a problem. Burly team Manager Woodfield sums up the New Zealanders Olympic prospects.

Pathe's reporter quizzes girl swimmer, Ngaire Lane.

As a greeting to Britain, the New Zealanders dance the Haka.

From Capetown to Northolt, a York airliner brings South Africa's ex-Premier. With the plane's wheels bogged down in mud, his arrival is delayed. Unaffected by the mishap, veteran statesman Jan Smuts, answering our reporter's question on the effect of the elections on commonwealth relations, says:

SOUND

Meanwhile, at a Stellenbosch farmhouse, the man who brought about South Africa's change of heart - Nationalist Daniel Malan - wears the new smile before taking up the Premiership.
