

OUR IDEAL - BY PHILIP

In London's Guildhall, the Freedom of the City is conferred upon Philip, Duke of Edinburgh. The ceremony is witnessed by his wife, awarded the same honour a year ago.

After the Duke has taken the Oath, Lord Mayor Sir Frederick Wells, hands him an oak box, containing his scroll of Freedom.

In his first official speech made before such a gathering, Philip mentions the City's honouring of great allied War leaders - and continues:
