SHANGHAI BUILDS A BOYS TOWN.

These Chinese boys are criminals. Orphaned by war, they became thieves in order to live. But they are not marching to jail. For these youngsters whose hard, dirty faces reflect the poverty which drove them to crime, are to be given a second chance at a boys town just outside Shanghai. A clean-up and a medical examination is the start of their new lives. Sponsored by Shanghai's Mayor Wu, this does a far more effective job than any reform school. China's wayward youngsters are learning that each citizen must co-operate with his neighbour to form the pattern of a happy society.

These are Chinese criminals. Orphaned by the war, they turned to theft. But they're not marching to jail. These youngsters, whose hard, filthy faces reflect the poverty which drove them to crime, are getting a second chance at a boys town just outside Shanghai. It begins with a cleanup and a medical examination. The idea for this trade and reform school came from ~~Shanghai's~~ Shanghai's Mayor Wu. With new lives before the, thousand of wayward Chinese boys are learning that each citizen must cooperate with his ~~neighbor~~ neighbor to form the patterns of a happy society.
