

2-F82501
48/75

STUDENTS MAKE HOLIDAYS PAY

A party of University students on a working vacation at Chessington Zoo, add to the long list of things elephants never forget.

Mostly medical students, they bring the gentle touch of hygiene to appreciative skins, in addition to acquiring the bedside manner so necessary to professional success.

Different jobs call for different techniques. For duties at Pets Corner, students of economics are considered the best suited. Like most economists they are more or less used to getting the bird.

Dietetics, of course, is the province of the medicos. This Bristol student observes, for future reference, the swift reaction aroused by more than one shillings-worth of meat. Dr. Summerskill ought to take note of this.

If we fed our meat ration to the tiger he would have something to growl about.