BRADMAN SAYS GOODBYE

In the grounds of Balmoral Castle, the greatest cricketer of our time - Donald George Bradman, 40-year-old skipper of Australia's Test team - bids farewell to the King and Queen, to Britain and to first class cricket. The game will be the poorer for his leaving.

Bradman led a team, unbeaten in all their matches. His batting and his sportsmanship will remain forever an example (and an encouragement) to the youth of Britain. At a London farewell luncheon, where a replica of the famous Warwick vase is presented to him, youth joins well-known old-timers in a parting tribute to Bradman; men like Maurice Tate of Sussex...Patsy Hendren of Middlesex...Sir Pelham Warner - the West Indies Leary Constantine and others equally great. They express Britain's thanks to a man who has brought added glory to the game - Don Bradman.
