ONE MINUTE NEWS

Empire Chiefs, attending the African Conference in London, visit Buckingham Palace to meet the great white chief who binds them into the British Commonwealth of Nations. From the Gold Coast comes Nana Sir Taibu Darku. From Nigeria, Gambia, Kenya, Uganda, Basutoland, Swaziland come others - many of them leaving their homes for the first time. Some come in European dress - others, more spectacularly, in their tribal robes. They represent 50 million people. They meet to discuss the problems of a continent - rich in economic resources - which, ultimately, will aid Britain's recovery.

Champagne, France

In the vineyards of Champagne - near the banks of the Lorraine River - French farmers gather the richest grape-harvest for more than a decade. Aided by a late Indian summer, vintners reap a record haul. Only old-timers can remember grapes like these.

French vineyards, which for centuries have ranked first in wine production, are recovering successfully from the war period which threatened to destroy their productivity for years to come. Now, there's prosperity ahead. A bottle of Burgundy 1948 will become, to connoisseurs all over the world, a vintage to be remembered.
