

PARIS PICKS EASTER HONNETS

Paris designers - who still have the first and final word on what makes the well-dressed woman - hatch out a handbox-full of new Easter bonnets.

Springing the usual seasonal flood of new styles on an unsuspecting public, Paris dictates that feathers will be strongly in favour.

Though its designer practices a peaceful calling, this one - "Mars" - will probably live up to its name and start a battle of conflicting opinions.

Number 7 - "Don Juan" - is one for the boys.

This model in velvet called "Mexico," is a shot at the Latin-American market. And finally, one that puts a new twist on the old question - can fifty million Frenchwomen really be wrong about this?
