

AUSSIES HUNT MAN-EATING SHARK

Trouble in Paradise. At Bondi Beach, Sydney's world-famous pleasure-resort, fishermen bait-up for a hunting trip in answer to an S.O.S. from bathers. It's that old spoilsport - a man-eating shark. And here's a strike! A fourteen-foot tiger of the sea determined to be the one that gets away. But he's being slowly drowned by the simple process of keeping his head under water until his air runs out.

With a reef-knot round the end that doesn't bite, he's hauled ashore. A hungry gangster who's had his last meal.

Ought only a few yards from the favourite surfing spot of 75,000 weekend pleasure-seekers, Bondi Beach is well rid of an unwelcome visitor.
