CONSTELLATION

BARUCH

WOLF

At Mitchel Field, New York, passengers alight from a Constellation which made a miraculous emergency landing after a mid-air collision with a small private plane. Both occupants of the single-engine Cessna were killed when its engine hurtled into the Constellation, leaving this fifteen-foot gash in its roof. But all ^{thirty-three} aboard the London-bound clipper walk away after this emergency landing only ten miles from the spot where they took off.
