

10558501
10558501
10558501

Three thousand fishermen race for the choice spots on frozen Great Bear Lake, Canada, as the St. Paul Winter Carnival opens with big catches for all. There are prizes for the best fish - and skaters don't get a look-in. There's a bite in the air, and a bite at every bait. Yes, it's nice fishing for ice fishing.

Down South in Atlantic City, beauty bowls 'em over at the start of the American bowling congress. More than five thousand teams from nine hundred and eighty cities in the U.S., Canada and Alaska are competing. Thirty thousand contestants keep it up for fifty-seven days, in quest of sixty-thousand pounds in prize money.

Big-time Bowling is right up America's alley.

In London, a handicrafts Exhibition sets out to glorify the Great Rumanian Girl. Seeing the sights on behalf of Britain's Wonderful Womanhood is Pearl Hackney, a displaced secretary from Waterlogged-Spa. The idea is to show Woman's Place in the Home - and Eric Barker couldn't agree more. To judge from exhibits, every Rumanian girl spends her time at home making things - behind Iron Curtains, of course.

Heart throb Eric Barker may not be Stalin's idea of a peasant but then that's nothing to what the peasants think of Stalin.