

49/38

FIRE DESTROYS TOKIO STREET

A holocaust sweeps through Tokio, threatening a residential area. Japan's democratized firemen are late off the mark and police are first on the scene. Some lengths behind, bearing a flag of truce, comes the fire brigade. Their peace offer is rejected by the blaze, the police and the water system. After the ensuing confusion has been sorted out, the fire fighters gallantly prepare to do battle, in spite of the jealous policemen.

With the water supply running short, the smokeaters fight on gamely. The fire is destroyed and so is this Tokio street.