

ACROBATIC STEEPLEJACK THRILLS GENEVA

In Geneva, where the 280-foot spire of St. Peter's Cathedral is under repair, 23-year old Henry Vlatto scales the scaffolding - apparently set on joining the angels before his time. At the highest point, this intrepid son of an acrobat spends his lunch-break limbering up in the heavenly gymnasium.

When it's time to knock-off, Henry takes the short way down. There is another way - but steeplejacks don't talk about that.

Risky though it looks, the queer thing about steeple-jacking is - it's really the safest job in the world. No competition.