FANS CROWD FILM STARS GARDEN PARTY

The stars - and their fans - take a day out. At the Sunday Pictorial Garden Party, 25,000 cinemagoers keep a date with their screen idols - and no introductions are necessary. Glamorous Beatrice Campbell and Richard Todd, pretty Rosamund John and Lee Remick ("g" as in gun) head the spot-your-favourites competition.

On the round-a-bouts, we find Stephen Murray - with his daughter - his most critical fan. And over here is dashing Michael Wilding talking to picture-hatted Jean Dowling. Associated British star Richard Todd - most recent arrival in starland - picks colleague Beatrice Campbell as his partner.

For autograph hunters, it's paradise come true. Pens at the ready, the famous (like John Mills) sign and the fans just sigh. See whom you can spot in this celebrities cavalcade. Hullo there, Bebe Daniels! Husband Ben Lyon (disputing Vic Oliver's claim that he can't write) meets the gang. And the gang - hunting for more scalps - comes across Stephen Murray. Another capture gives in willingly. It's all in aid of a good cause. A jeep load of glamour is next under siege. Young Petula Clark is there; and we spot Jean Dowling again. The known and unknown rub shoulders at a party that thousands vote the best film show of the year.
