

EUROPE'S BIGGEST POULTRY FARM RE-OPENS

Europe's largest poultry farm (in Saxony, Central Germany) is re-opened. Here, Britain's housewives could find the answer to their never-ending quest for eggs. A week's haul would give everybody in Manchester half-a-dozen new laid. Enough to supply all Wolverhampton is kept back for giant-sized incubators. There is lots of work for the registrar - for 6,000 chicks are born every day.

If Herr Schmidt fancies duck for dinner, he has only to come to Saxony and he can pick one out of a 100,000.

When it's feeding time - the poultry population uses up 20 tons of feed a day. It's a case of survival of the fittest - and the even take the hindmost.
