

MIDSUMMER MADNESS.

Crazy days are here again ... it's the Silly Season. In San Jose, California, "Ozzie" Osborne celebrates his birthday - up an 80-foot pole. A girl admirer brings him his presents, by helicopter, as "Ozzie" opens an attack on his own 52-day squatting record. To make it right, she also brings him a beautiful birthday-cake ... and nearly gives him a haircut.

Another admirer hangs around in case the cake doesn't agree with him. But "Ozzie" seems so happy, he'll probably stay up there till his next birthday.

In Italy, the worst happens - shades of Swoozy Todd as, at a local show, hairdressers from all parts of the country are allowed to do just what they please. And see what happens!
 The best thing to do with this ostrich-feather hair-do ... bury your head in the sand.

This creation's called "The Fountain."

And this one "Shipwrecked on a Permanent Wave." If this is a hair-do - don't!

As if that isn't bad enough, they have to bring the railways in. Clear the tracks - here comes the old S.S.!

Pacific hell-drivers obey the oldest rule-of-the-road, the one about keeping cool with two tons of ice. The human battering-ram lives up to his name in the "Circus of Thrills" staged in San Francisco. The crowd gasps as the stunt-man pile car on car ... and danger on danger.

Next the hell-drivers speed up the work of demolition with a high-dive into a nest of run-down roadsters.

There's a few jalopies left, so what about an encore? - one-for-the-road it'll never see again ...
